

Lesson Six – Exercise One

In each sentence below, (1) Separate any shifters from the Trunk with parenthesis, (2) mark the two X-word places, (3) box the subject, (4) draw a wavy line facing the subject over the Predicate, (5) indicate the ties, (6) If there is a verb tie, name the verb form that begins Y. (7) label the M and Y places. Follow the example,

1. Evolutionary psychology is not crazy.
2. It can often explain many things about us.
3. Jane and Janet are chimpanzees.
4. Russ Smith has carefully trained them for a number of years.
5. Russ would give them 3 grapes every time they opened a box.
6. After a few weeks, he openly began giving Janet 5 grapes for the same trick.
7. However, Jane still continued to receive 3 grapes for opening the box.
8. Very shortly thereafter, Jane would not open the box any longer.
9. Russ was not treating Jane and Janet equally.
10. Jane quickly understood this.
11. She immediately stopped opening the box.
12. Evolutionary psychologists believe people have an innate sense of fairness.